THE PRINCIPAL CONNECTION

@mrlajoiebham With sadness I must report on another beloved BHM staff member moving on. Carolyn Melcher, one of our nurses, has been transferred to the Health Aide position at Bowdoin Central School. You know Mrs. Melcher as one of the most caring school adults we have, with an infectious laugh. She is the coordinator of our backpack program. She is also a highly-skilled nurse, and her talents are very much needed at her new school. Mrs. Melcher will still substitute here occasionally, so it is not goodbye – just see you soon. Thank you, Mrs. Melcher, for helping make our school the caring place it is.

HOT TOPIC: GOAL – MATH ACHIEVEMENT

Schools don't have goals. People have goals, or they don't.

- adapted from education guru, Richard Dufour

This third installment in my series on our school goals focuses on Math achievement. While you saw last week that our Literacy achievement is strong, we are not quite there with Math. Over the last three years, our Math achievement has been only about 4% above the school district average, and 10% above the state average. Not bad, especially considering the rigorous standards we have adopted in Math. However, about half of our fifth graders, on average, are going on to the Middle School with gaps in their Math understanding. Something has to change.

As a whole staff we are undertaking a Math Action Research project, which will last throughout the year. Teams of teachers are studying where gaps in our students' Math knowledge might exist. As a proficiency-based school, we believe that gaps in student understanding must be addressed before moving on; we can't just skip over them and expect things to get better. We are exploring the learning progressions for Math skills, and then trying out some different ways to help our kids get to mastery. We will check in periodically as a whole school to explore trends and insights, and share some breakthroughs teams might have made. Already we are finding that our students need more practice creating concrete and visual models of Math knowledge, as well as how to approach real-world and complex Math problems.

While Literacy achievement will remain a top priority for our school, we are devoting more energy than ever to growing our students as Mathematicians. One way you can help is by encouraging your child to persist through challenges, Math-related or otherwise. Kids who have a growth mindset and perseverance are more likely to attack challenging problems of all kinds. And math is a challenge we are taking on together.

Yours in meaningful learning that lasts,

Mr. Lajoie ☺

Bowdoinham welcomes... Maine Author-Illustrator Anne Sibley O'Brien

School Author Visit, Wednesday October 25, 2017, Bowdoinham Community School

O'Brien will visit the Bowdoinham Community School to explore the subject of "inclusion and welcoming." Using her own personal stories, books, and art O'Brien will invite students to take a look at the wider world and discover what we all have in common as humans. Teacher/Parent Workshop: Books as Bridges: Children's Literature & Racial Diversity in the Classroom, Thursday October 26, 2017, 4-5pm, Bowdoinham Community School. O'Brien will provide an overview of the latest findings on how children develop ideas about race. She'll share recent research about why diverse books are so important, and how they can be used to spark natural conversations about human differences. The workshop will include a list of recommended books for sparking positive, inclusive discussions and resources for further exploration. This workshop is open to everyone. Parents and teachers throughout the SAD 75 school district are welcome. Please RSVP to caringkids04008@gmail.com or just show up!

Community Celebration & Shared Read, Thursday October 26, 2017, 6:30-7:30pm, Bowdoinham Community School Students will share ideas and posters created with O'Brien at school. Local diversity experts will enlarge the conversation by sharing their expertise and personal experiences relating to inclusion/exclusion. Community members and families will brainstorm ways to take action on welcoming diversity. The Community Celebration will lead to the selection of a relevant title for a Community Shared Read. Please join us!

From the Learning Commons: Digital Citizenship

During the month of October, we spend time talking about what it means to be a good digital citizen. In grades K-2, the focus is on safety: always ask a trusted adult if you can go online; only go to sites that a trusted adult has okayed; if you do go somewhere that does not feel safe, tell a trusted adult. In grade 2, we begin to talk about what information is okay to share and what information is not okay to share. Grades 3-5 go more deeply into how to communicate respectfully online while keeping safe. We also spend time talking about cyberbullying. We use resources from Common Sense Media when teaching these lessons. Common Sense Media is more than just lessons for students, though. They have great resources for families, too. From knowing how to talk with your children about what is happening in the news to knowing what would be a good app, book or movie for your child. Here are so many great resources available on this site. We encourage you to check out this helpful resource.
